

FEE Summer Seminars 2010: “Liberty and History”
“Classical Liberal Theories of Class and the State”
Dr. David M. Hart

“Classical Liberal Theories of Class and the State”
Dr. David M. Hart

Tuesday 15 June
9.00-10.30 a.m.

Information for FEE

Revised Bio January 6, 2010

David Hart was born and raised in Sydney, Australia. He did his undergraduate work at Macquarie University, Sydney, writing a thesis on the radical anti-statist thought of the Belgian/French political economist Gustave de Molinari.

After spending a year in Germany studying German Imperialism and the origins of the First World War at the University of Mainz, David completed an M.A. in history at Stanford University. While at Stanford he worked on student programs for the Institute for Humane Studies (when it was located at Menlo Park, California) where he was founding editor of Humane Studies Review.

David received a Ph.D. in history from King's College, Cambridge on the work of two leading French classical liberals of the early 19th century, Charles Comte and Charles Dunoyer who pioneered a liberal class theory of history. He then taught for 15 years in the Department of History at the University of Adelaide in South Australia where he was awarded the University teaching prize.

Quotations about Liberty and Power

Milton argues that a Monarchy wants the people to be prosperous only so it can better fleece them (1660)

In the year that the English Commonwealth was replaced by the restored monarchy of the Stuarts (1660), the poet and revolutionary politician John Milton (1608–1674) contrasts a Commonwealth, which wants its people to flourish for their own sakes, with a Monarchy, which wants them to be prosperous so it can fleece them:

[F]or of all governments a Commonwealth aims most to make the people flourishing, vertuous, noble and high spirited. Monarchs will never permitt: whose aim is to make the people, wealthy indeed perhaps and wel-fleec't for thir own shearing , and [for] the supply of regal prodigalitie; but otherwise softest, basest, vitioussest, servilest, easiest to be kept under; and not only in fleece, but in minde also sheepishest.

See full quote and previous quotations about liberty.

Read the full quote in context here.

More works by [John Milton \(1608 - 1674\) and on The English Revolution]

Home

Quick Search

People

Periods

Schools of Thought

Titles

Subject Areas

Topics

Liberty Fund Books

Quotations

Audio

About the PLL

Copyright and Fair
Use Statement

The Portable Library of Liberty

Welcome to the Portable Library of Liberty. This collection of texts and audio files is drawn from the Online Library of Liberty, published by Liberty Fund, Inc.

What's Inside:

This disk contains 1,001 titles in E-book PDF format which are self-contained and searchable. They are organized by titles, subject areas, and topics. (Learn more about this feature.)

This disk contains works by hundreds of authors from Ancient Sumeria to the present, and is organized by people, periods, and schools of thought. (Learn more about this feature.)

A live-search system and live filters on nearly every page makes it easy to find exactly what you're looking for. (Learn more about this feature.)

In addition, you can listen to interviews with 36 leading scholars from the Intellectual Portrait Series and 7 lectures on The Legacy of Friedrich Hayek.

You can browse quotations of the week from the past six years of the OLL Web site. You will also see a new random quote each time you return to this page. (Learn more about this feature.)

50th Anniversary

This year, 2010, is the 50th anniversary of the founding of Liberty Fund by Pierre F. Goodrich. The Foundation develops, supervises, and finances its own educational activities to foster thought and encourage discourse on the nature of individual liberty, limited and constitutional government, and the free market. It does this by publishing classic works on liberty, organizing conferences, and hosting websites to promote understanding of individual liberty. (Learn more about Liberty Fund.)

Random Quotation

Adam Smith argued that the "propensity to truck, barter, and exchange" was inherent in human nature and gave rise to things such as the division of labour (1776)

In his discussion of the division of labor, Adam Smith argues that the propensity to truck, barter, and exchange is part of human nature:

This division of labour, from which so many advantages are derived, is not originally the effect of any human wisdom, which foresees and intends that general opulence to which it gives occasion. It is the necessary, though very slow and gradual consequence of a certain propensity in human nature which has in view no such extensive utility; the propensity to truck, barter, and exchange one thing for another.

See full quote and other quotations about liberty.

More works by [Adam Smith \(1723 - 1790\)]

To to see the most recently added quotes go to the OLL website. [external link]

David paying homage to those great defenders of liberty, Marx and Engels, in Shanghai 2009

Key Questions:

- What is the State and how does it function?
- Who benefits and who loses from the activities of the state?
(The Rulers and the Ruled)
- What have classical liberals (libertarians) thought of this over the past 200 years or so?

The Main Features of the State:

1. It enjoys a Monopoly of Violence in a given Geographical Area
2. It often enjoys a Monopoly of other Strategic Services and Institutions
3. A different Standard of Moral and Legal Judgement is Applied to the State
4. The State needs Obedient and Compliant Taxpayers, Citizens, and Soldiers who will “Obey, Pay, and Die”
5. The Origin of the State lies in War and Conquest
6. The State has had an Historical Tendency to Expand its Powers
7. The State is Inherently Unstable

“THE STATE is the great fiction by
which EVERYONE
endeavors to live at
the expense of
EVERYONE ELSE.”

Frédéric Bastiat (1801-1850)

Frontispiece to Thomas Hobbes, The Leviathan (1651). Motto - "Non est potestas Super Terram quae Comparetur ei" (There is no power on earth to be compared to him).

1. The Leviathan (or absolute monarch) wearing a crown and holding a sword (military power) and a crosier (religious power). His body is the "body politic" (made up of his subjects) and he is the "head" of state.

2. The two pillars of his power are the army (left) and the established church (right)

3. Army: castle, crown, cannon, weaponry, battle

4. Church: cathedral, bishop's mitre, excommunication, logic, religious court

SPECTRUM OF STATE POWER

STATISM

LIBERTY

Communism

Fascism

Welfare/Warfare State

Minarchist State

Voluntary "State"

COMMUNISM
Fully planned economy & state
controlled society
- Stalinism, Pol
Pot

FASCISM/NAZISM:
State directed private industry
Adulation of leader
War & conquest
- Italy, Germany
1930s-40s

WELFARE STATE:
State provision health,
education, welfare
Significant regulation of economy
- Western Europe

WELFARE/WARFARE STATE:
Significant state intervention
health, education, welfare
Significant regulation of economy
Military-Industrial Complex
War & empire
- USA

MINARCHIST STATE:
defence, police, limited
number of other public goods

ULTRA-MINARCHIST
STATE:
defence, police, with considerable private activity in security

FULLY VOLUNTARY
"STATE":
- all state activities
deregulated, privatized, or abolished

FUNCTIONS OF THE CLASSICAL LIBERAL STATE

A. Smith, JS Mill
F.A. Hayek

L. Mises, A. Rand
R. Nozick

J.B. Say
G. de Molinari 2

H. Spencer
G. de Molinari 1
Murray Rothbard

CLASSICAL LIBERAL STATE:
defence, police, public goods (broadly defined)

MINARCHIST STATE:
defence, police, no other public goods

ULTRA-MINARCHIST OR "NIGHTWATCHMAN" STATE:
defence, police, with considerable private activity in security

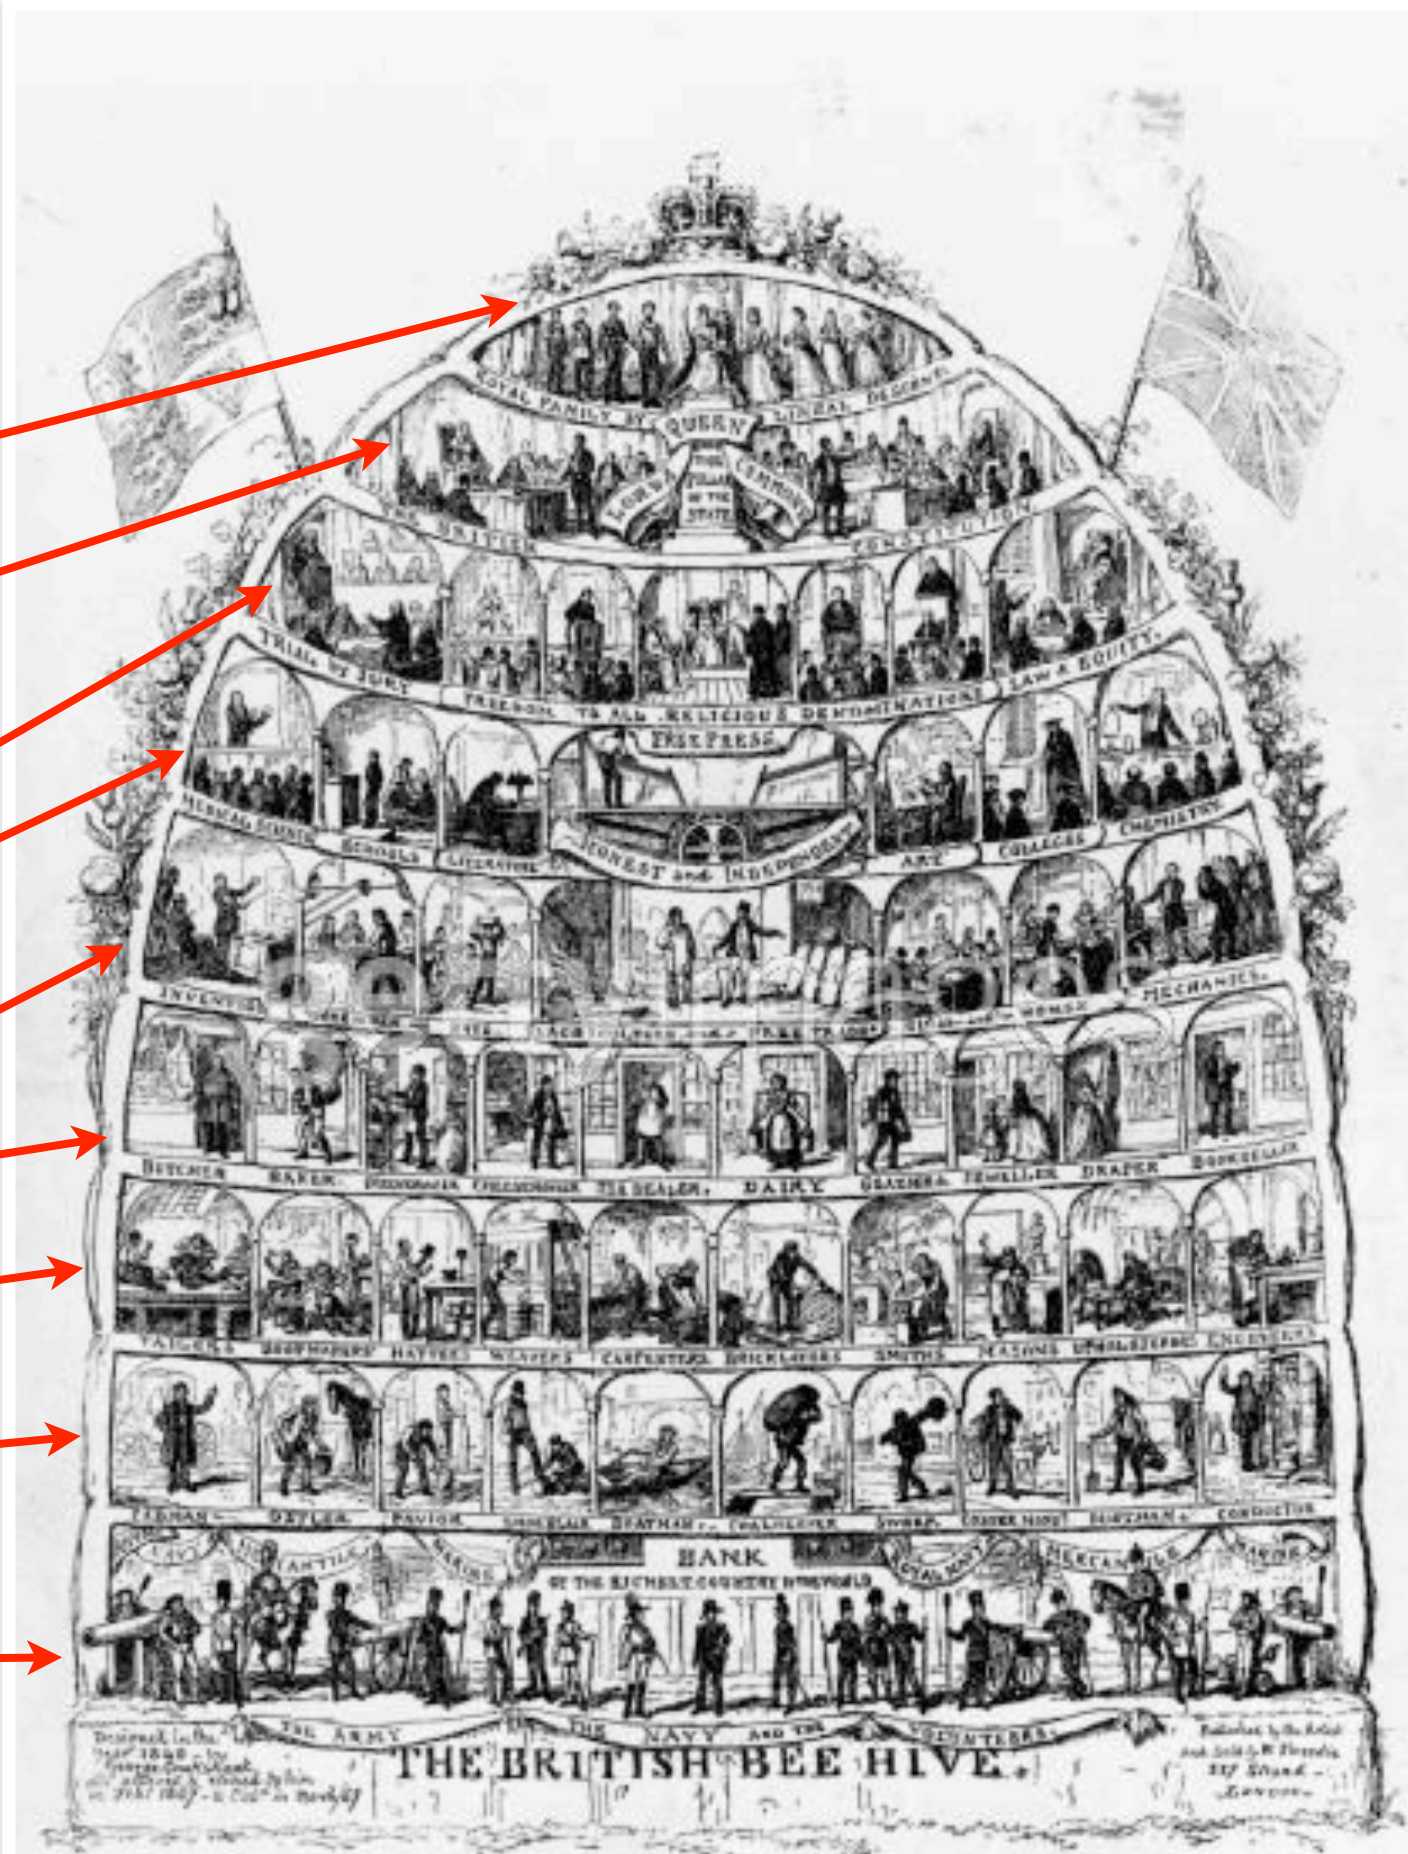

FULLY PRIVATISED "STATE" OR VOLUNTARISM:
private production of security

The Main Features of the Ruling Class:

1. The State divides Society into two Rival Groups or Classes
2. The Ruling Class is Historically Specific and is Constantly Changing over Time
3. The Sovereign Power makes Constantly Shifting Alliances with Vested Interests
4. Legislation socializes Costs and Privatizes Benefits for Favoured Groups

George Cruikshank, "The British Bee Hive" (1840, 1867)

- 1. The Royal Family
- 2. Lords and Commons: The Pillar of the State
- 3. Law and Freedom of Religion
- 4. Science, Arts, Education
- 5. Men/Boys, Free Trade, Women/Girls
- 6. Trades 1
- 7. Trades 2
- 8. Trades 3
- 9. Bank of the Richest Country in the World; Army, Navy, Volunteers

A PENNY POLITICAL PICTURE FOR THE PEOPLE, WITH A FEW WORDS UPON PARLIAMENTARY REFORM.
BY THEIR OLD FRIEND, GEORGE CRUIKSHANK

Figure 4.1 Schematic Representation of the Ratchet

Key Names and Dates

David Hume (1711-1776)

Adam Smith (1723-1790)

Jacques Turgot (1727-1781)

Thomas Paine (1737-1809)

Jeremy Bentham (1748-1832)

Benjamin Constant (1767-1830)

James Mill (1773-1836)

Charles Comte (1782-1837)

John C. Calhoun (1782-1850)

Charles Dunoyer (1786-1862)

John Wade (1788-1875)

Frédéric Bastiat (1801-1850)

Gustave de Molinari (1819-1912)

Herbert Spencer (1820-1903)

Vilfredo Pareto (1848-1923)

Franz Oppenheimer (1864-1943)

Albert Jay Nock (1873-1945)

Ludwig von Mises (1881-1973)

Randolph Bourne (1886-1918)

Murray Rothbard (1926-1995)

“THE STATE is the
great fiction by
which EVERYONE
endeavors to live at
the expense of
EVERYONE ELSE.”

Frédéric Bastiat (1801-1850)

“Classical Liberal Theories of Class and the State”

Tuesday June 15, 2010

Dr. David M. Hart (dmhart@mac.com)

<http://homepage.mac.com/dmhart/>

<http://oll.libertyfund.org>

Some Key Quotations on State and Class.

1. David Hume (1711-1776): the origin of government is in war and begins a struggle between Authority and Liberty (1777)

Government commences more casually and more imperfectly. It is probable, that the first ascendant of one man over multitudes begun during a state of war; where the superiority of courage and of genius discovers itself most visibly, where unanimity and concert are most requisite, and where the pernicious effects of disorder are most sensibly felt. The long continuance of that state, an incident common among savage tribes, enured the people to submission; and if the chieftain possessed as much equity as prudence and valour, he became, even during peace, the arbiter of all differences, and could gradually, by a mixture of force and consent, establish his authority. The benefit sensibly felt from his influence, made it be cherished by the people, at least by the peaceable and well disposed among them; and if his son enjoyed the same good qualities, government advanced the sooner to maturity and perfection; but was still in a feeble state, till the farther progress of improvement procured the magistrate a revenue, and enabled him to bestow rewards on the several instruments of his administration, and to inflict punishments on the refractory and disobedient. Before that period, each exertion of his influence must have been particular, and founded on the peculiar circumstances of the case. After it, submission was no longer a matter of choice in the bulk of the community, but was rigorously exacted by the authority of the supreme magistrate.

In all governments, there is a perpetual intestine struggle, open or secret, between Authority and Liberty; and neither of them can ever absolutely prevail in the contest. A great sacrifice of liberty must necessarily be made in every government; yet even the authority, which confines liberty, can never, and perhaps ought never, in any constitution, to become quite entire and uncontrollable....

[Source: David Hume, Essays Moral, Political, Literary, edited and with a Foreword, Notes, and Glossary by Eugene F. Miller, with an appendix of variant readings from the 1889 edition by T.H. Green and T.H. Grose, revised edition (Indianapolis: Liberty Fund 1987). Chapter: ESSAY V: OF THE ORIGIN OF GOVERNMENT. < <http://oll.libertyfund.org/title/704/137486> >.

2. Thomas Paine (1737-1809): government began as a banditti of ruffians who parcelled out the world (1792)

Great part of that order which reigns among mankind is not the effect of government. It has its origin in the principles of society and the natural constitution of man. It existed prior to government, and would exist if the formality of government was abolished. The mutual dependence and reciprocal interest which man has upon man, and all the parts of civilised community upon each other, create that great chain of connection which holds it together. The landholder, the farmer, the manufacturer, the merchant, the tradesman, and every occupation, prospers by the aid which each receives from the other, and from the whole. Common interest regulates their concerns, and forms their law; and the laws which common usage ordains, have a greater influence than the laws of government. In fine society performs for itself almost everything which is ascribed to government.

Government is no farther necessary than to supply the few cases to which society and civilisation are not conveniently competent; and instances are not wanting to show, that everything which government can usefully add thereto, has been performed by the common consent of society, without government. So far is it from being true, as has been pretended, that the abolition of any formal government is the dissolution of society, that it acts by a contrary impulse, and brings the latter the closer together. All that part of its organisation which it had committed to its government, devolves again upon itself, and acts through its medium. When men, as well from natural instinct as from reciprocal benefits, have habituated themselves to social and civilised life, there is always enough of its principles in practice to carry them through any changes they may find necessary or convenient to make in their government. In short, man is so naturally a creature of society that it is almost impossible to put him out of it.

[Source: The Writings of Thomas Paine, Collected and Edited by Moncure Daniel Conway (New York: G.P. Putnam's Sons, 1894). Vol. 2. Rights of Man Part II: Chapter I.: Of society and civilisation. < <http://oll.libertyfund.org/title/344/17368> >.

It is impossible that such governments as have hitherto existed in the world, could have commenced by any other means than a total violation of every principle sacred and moral. The obscurity in which the origin of all the present old governments is buried, implies the iniquity and disgrace with which they began. The origin of the present government of America and France will ever be remembered, because it is honourable to record it; but with respect to the rest, even Flattery has consigned them to the tomb of time, without an inscription.

It could have been no difficult thing in the early and solitary ages of the world, while the chief employment of men was that of attending flocks and herds, for a banditti of ruffians to overrun a country, and lay it under contributions. Their power being thus established, the chief of the band contrived to lose the name of Robber in that of Monarch; and hence the origin of Monarchy and Kings...

Those bands of robbers having parcelled out the world, and divided it into dominions, began, as is naturally the case, to quarrel with each other. What at first was obtained by violence was considered by others as lawful to be taken, and a second plunderer succeeded the first. They alternately invaded the dominions which each had assigned to himself, and the brutality with which they treated each other explains the original character of monarchy. It was ruffian torturing ruffian. The conqueror considered the conquered, not as his prisoner, but his property. He led him in triumph rattling in chains, and doomed him, at pleasure, to slavery or death. As time obliterated the history of their beginning, their successors assumed new appearances, to cut off the entail of their disgrace, but their principles and objects remained the same. What at first was plunder, assumed the softer name of revenue; and the power originally usurped, they affected to inherit.

From such beginning of governments, what could be expected but a continued system of war and extortion? It has established itself into a trade. The vice is not peculiar to one more than to another, but is the common principle of all. There does not exist within such governments sufficient stamina whereon to engraft reformation; and the shortest and most effectual remedy is to begin anew on the ground of the nation.

[Source: The Writings of Thomas Paine, Collected and Edited by Moncure Daniel Conway (New York: G.P. Putnam's Sons, 1894). Vol. 2. Rights of Man Part II: Chapter II.: Of the origin of the present old governments. < <http://oll.libertyfund.org/title/344/17370> >.

3. Jeremy Bentham (1748-1832): the sinister interest of the ruling one and the sub-ruling-few (1820s)

Under a government which has for its main object the sacrifice of the greatest happiness of the greatest number, to the sinister interest of the ruling one and the sub-ruling few, corruption and delusion to the greatest extent possible, are necessary to that object: waste, in so far as conducive to the increase of the corruption and delusion fund, a subordinate or co-ordinate object: war, were it only as a means and pretence for such waste, another object never out of view: that object, together with those others, invariably pursued, in so far as the contributions capable of being extracted from contributors, involuntary or voluntary, in the shape of taxes, or in the shape of loans, i. e. annuities paid by government by means of further taxes, can be obtained:—under such a government, by every penny paid into the Treasury, the means of diminishing the happiness of the greatest number receive increase;—by every penny which is prevented from taking that pernicious course, the diminution of that general happiness is so far prevented.

[Source: Jeremy Bentham, "Principles of Judicial Proceedure" (written in the 1820s), The Works of Jeremy Bentham, published under the Superintendence of his Executor, John Bowring (Edinburgh: William Tait, 1843). 11 vols. CHAPTER XXIV.: SPECIAL JURIES. <<http://oll.libertyfund.org/title/1921/113753/2341232>>]

4. James Mill (1773-1836): the sinister interests of the ruling few (1825)

Sancho Panza had a scheme for deriving advantage from the government of an island. He would sell the people for slaves, and put the money in his pocket. "The Few," in some countries, find in colonies, a thing which is very dear to them; they find, the one part of them, the precious matter with which to influence; the other, the precious matter with which to be influenced;—the one, the precious matter with which to make political dependents; the other, the precious matter with which they are made political dependents;—the one, the precious matter by which they augment their power; the other, the precious matter by which they augment their riches. Both portions of the "ruling Few," therefore, find their account in the possession of colonies. There is not one of the colonies but what augments the number of places. There are governorships and judgeships, and a long train of et ceteras; and above all, there is not one of them but what requires an additional number of troops, and an additional portion of navy. In every additional portion of army and navy, beside the glory of the thing, there are generalships, and colonelships, and captainships, and lieutenantships, and in the equipping and supplying of additional portions of army and navy, there are always gains, which may be thrown in the way of a friend. All this is enough to account for a very considerable quantity of affection maintained towards colonies.

[Source: James Mill, "Colony", Supplement to the Encyclopedia Britannica (London: J. Innes, 1825). Conclusion.—Tendency of Colonial Possessions to produce or prolong bad Government.<<http://oll.libertyfund.org/title/1765/92897/2081471>>]

5. John Wade (1788-1875): the uncontrolled and irresponsible ascendance of the aristocratic system (1832)

Having obtained the power (after the restoration of the monarchy in 1660), the Aristocracy have exercised it as uncontrolled power usually is exercised, namely, solely for their own advantage: they have rid themselves of what duties were anciently annexed to their order, and monopolized nearly all the honours and emoluments of society...

If we only examine the list of taxes, as we shortly intend to do, we shall find that the aristocracy have, comparatively, exempted themselves from impost, while the burden falls exclusively on the people. The duties imposed by the corn-laws are a tax paid directly for the support of the order; while, with the exception of the land-tax, a trifling impost, all other duties, the assessed taxes, excise, customs, stamps, post-office duties, fall with disproportionate weight on the middling and working classes, and scarcely touch the massive incomes of the nobility.

This is one of the great evils resulting from the political supremacy of the peerage. Instead of bearing the burden of taxation, which, in fact, is the original tenure on which they acquired the territorial possessions, they have laid it on the people. Nothing can be more unjust and oppressive. The comforts of one class ought never to be encroached upon, while another class remains in the enjoyment of redundant luxuries. It is the legitimate object of good government to prevent the extremes of wealth and indigence, and diffuse equally, through all classes, the bounties of nature. But the aristocratic system is the reverse of this principle. It weighs chiefly on want and penury; it tramples on those already depressed; and rushes, almost to annihilation, the most useful classes by its unceasing exactions.

[Source: The Extraordinary Black Book: An Exposition of Abuses in Church and State, Courts of Law, Representation, Municipal and Corporate Bodies; with a precis of the House of Common, past, present and to come. A New Edition. Ed. John Wade (London: Effingham Wilson, 1832), pp. 257-58.]

6. Frédéric Bastiat (1801-1850): the State is the Great Fiction (1848)

It is this unfortunate primitive tendency within all men to divide into two our complex human lot, shifting Pain onto others and keeping Satisfaction for themselves. It remains to be seen in what new form this sorry tendency will manifest itself.

Oppressors no longer act directly on the oppressed using their own forces. No, our conscience has become too scrupulous for that. There are still tyrants and victims certainly, but between them has placed itself the intermediary that is the State, that is to say, the law itself. What is more calculated to silence our scruples and, perhaps more appealing, to overcome our resistance? For this reason, we all make calls upon the State on one ground or pretext or another. We tell it "I do not consider that there is a satisfactory relation between the goods I enjoy and my work. I would like to take a little from the property of others to establish the balance I desire. But this is dangerous. Can you not make my task easier? Could you not provide me with a good position? Or else hinder the production of my competitors? Or else make me an interest free loan of the capital you have taken from its owners? Or raise my children at public expense? Or award me subsidies by way of subornation? Or ensure my well-being when I reach the age of fifty? By these means I will achieve my aim with a perfectly clear conscience, since the law itself will have acted on my behalf and I will achieve all the advantages of spoliation without ever having incurred either its risks or opprobrium!

As it is certain, on the one hand, that we all address more or less similar requests to the State and, on the other, it is plain that the State cannot procure satisfaction for some without adding to the work of the others, while waiting for a new definition of the State, I think I am authorized to give my own here. Who knows whether it will not carry off the prize? Here it is:

THE STATE is the great fiction by which EVERYONE endeavors to live at the expense of EVERYONE ELSE.

For today, as in the past, each person more or less wants to profit from the work of others. We do not dare display this sentiment; we even hide it from ourselves, and then what do we do? We design an intermediary, we address ourselves to THE STATE, and each class in turn comes forward to say to it "You who can take things straightforwardly and honestly, take something from the general public and we will share it." Alas! The State has a very ready tendency to follow this diabolical advice as it is made up of ministers and civil servants, in short, men, who like all men are filled with the desire and are always quick to seize the opportunity to see their wealth and influence increase. The State is therefore quick to understand the profit it can make from the role that the general public has entrusted to it. It will be the arbiter and master of every destiny. It will take a great deal; therefore a great deal will remain to it. It will increase the number of its agents and widen the circle of its attributions. It will end by achieving crushing proportions.

But what we should clearly note is the astonishing blindness of the general public in all this. When happy soldiers reduced the conquered to slavery they were barbaric, but they were not absurd. Their aim, like ours, was to live at someone else's expense, but they did not fail to do so like us. What ought we to think of a people who do not appear to have any idea that reciprocal pillage is no less pillage because it is reciprocal, that it is no less criminal because it is executed legally and in an orderly fashion, that it adds nothing to public well-being and that, on the contrary, it reduces well-being by everything that this spendthrift of an intermediary that we call the STATE costs us?...

In fact, the State is not and cannot be one-handed. It has two hands, one to receive and the other to give; in other words, the rough hand and the gentle hand. The activity of the second is of necessity subordinate to the activity of the first. Strictly speaking, The State is able to take and not give back. This has been seen and is explained by the porous and absorbent nature of its hands, which always retain part and sometimes all of what they touch. But what has never been seen, will never be seen and cannot even be conceived is that the State will give to the general public more than it has taken from them. It is therefore a sublime folly for us to adopt toward it the humble attitude of beggars. It is radically impossible for it to confer a particular advantage on some of the individuals who make up the community without inflicting greater damage on the community as a whole.

[Source: Frédéric Bastiat, "L'État" (The State) (June 1848). New Liberty Fund translation. Also in Frédéric Bastiat, Selected Essays on Political Economy, trans. Seymour Cain, ed. George B. de Huszar, introduction by F.A. Hayek (Irvington-on-Hudson: Foundation for Economic Education, 1995). Chapter: 5: The State. <<http://oll.libertyfund.org/title/956/35453>>

7. John C. Calhoun (1782-1850): the tax-consumers vs. the tax-payers (1849)

The necessary result, then, of the unequal fiscal action of the government is, to divide the community into two great classes; one consisting of those who, in reality, pay the taxes, and, of course, bear exclusively the burthen of supporting the government; and the other, of those who are the recipients of their proceeds, through disbursements, and who are, in fact, supported by the government; or, in fewer words, to divide it into tax-payers and tax-consumers.

But the effect of this is to place them in antagonistic relations, in reference to the fiscal action of the government, and the entire course of policy therewith connected. For, the greater the taxes and disbursements, the greater the gain of the one and the loss of the other—and vice versa; and consequently, the more the policy of the government is calculated to increase taxes and disbursements, the more it will be favored by the one and opposed by the other.

[Source: John C. Calhoun, Union and Liberty: The Political Philosophy of John C. Calhoun, ed. Ross M. Lence (Indianapolis: Liberty Fund, 1992). A DISQUISITION ON GOVERNMENT (1849) <<http://oll.libertyfund.org/title/683/107113/1934493>>]

8. Herbert Spencer (1820-1903): the militant vs. the industrial types of society (1870s)

Most significant of all, however, are the changes in England itself, first retrogressive and then progressive, that occurred during the war-period which extended from 1775 to 1815, and during the subsequent period of peace. At the end of the last century and the beginning of this, reversion towards ownership of the individual by the society had gone a long way. "To statesmen, the State, as a unit, was all in all, and it is really difficult to find any evidence that the people were thought of at all, except in the relation of obedience." "The Government regarded the people with little other view than as a taxable and soldier-yielding mass." While the militant part of the community had greatly developed, the industrial part had approached towards the condition of a permanent commissariat. By conscription and by press-gangs, was carried to a relatively vast extent that sacrifice of the citizen in life and liberty which war entails; and the claims to property were trenched on by merciless taxation, weighing down the middle classes so grievously that they had greatly to lower their rate of living, while the people at large were so distressed (partly no doubt by bad harvests) that "hundreds ate nettles and other weeds." With these major aggressions upon the individual by the State, went numerous minor aggressions. Irresponsible agents of the executive were empowered to suppress public meetings and seize their leaders: death being the punishment for those who did not disperse when ordered. Libraries and news-rooms could not be opened without licence; and it was penal to lend books without permission. There were "strenuous attempts made to silence the press;" and booksellers dared not publish works by obnoxious authors. "Spies were paid, witnesses were suborned, juries were packed, and the habeas corpus Act being constantly suspended, the Crown had the power of imprisoning without inquiry and without limitation." While the Government taxed and coerced and restrained the citizen to this extent, its protection of him was inefficient. It is true that the penal code was made more extensive and more severe. The definition of treason was enlarged, and numerous offences were made capital which were not capital before; so that there was "a vast and absurd variety of offences for which men and women were sentenced to death by the score." there was "a devilish levity in dealing with human life." But at the same time there was not an increase, but rather a decrease, of security. As says Mr. Pike in his History of Crime in England, "it became apparent that the greater the strain of the conflict the greater is the danger of a reaction towards violence and lawlessness." Turn now to the opposite picture. After recovery from the prostration which prolonged wars had left, and after the dying away of those social perturbations caused by impoverishment, there began a revival of traits proper to the industrial type. Coercion of the citizen by the State decreased in various ways. Voluntary enlistment replaced compulsory military service; and there disappeared some minor restraints over personal freedom, as instance the repeal of laws which forbade artizans to travel where they pleased, and which interdicted trades-unions. With these manifestations of greater respect for personal freedom, may be joined those shown in the amelioration of the penal code: the public whipping of females being first abolished; then the long list of capital offences being reduced until there finally remained but one; and, eventually, the pillory and imprisonment for debt being abolished. Such penalties on religious independence as remained disappeared; first by removal of those directed against Protestant Dissenters, and then of those which weighed on Catholics, and then of some which told specially against Quakers and Jews. By the Parliamentary Reform Bill and the Municipal Reform Bill, vast numbers were removed from the subject classes to the governing classes. Interferences with the business-transactions of citizens were diminished by allowing free trade in bullion, by permitting joint-stock banks, by abolishing multitudinous restrictions on the importation of commodities—leaving eventually but few which pay duty. Moreover while these and kindred changes, such as the removal of restraining burdens on the press, decreased the impediments to free actions of citizens, the protective action of the State was increased. By a greatly-improved police system, by county courts, and so forth, personal safety and claims to property were better secured.

Source: Herbert Spencer, Political Institutions, being Part V of the Principles of Sociology (The Concluding Portion of Vol. II) (London: Williams and Norgate, 1882). [CHAPTER XVIII.: the industrial type of society. <<http://oll.libertyfund.org/title/1336/54833>>]

9. Vilfredo Pareto (1848-1923): the circulation of the elites (1901)

Except during short intervals of time, peoples are always governed by an elite. I use the word elite (It. aristocrazia) in its etymological sense, meaning the strongest, the most energetic, and most capable - for good as well as evil. However, due to an important physiological law, elites do not last. Hence - the history of man is the history of the continuous replacement of certain elites: as one ascends, another declines. Such is the real phenomenon, though to us it may often appear under another form.

The new elite which seeks to supercede the old one, or merely to share its power and honors, does not admit to such an intention frankly and openly. Instead it assumes the leadership of all the oppressed, declares that it will pursue not its own good but the good of the many; and it goes to battle, not for the rights of a restricted class, but for the rights of almost the entire citizenry. Of course, once victory is won, it subjugates the erstwhile allies, or, at best, offers them some formal concessions. Such is the history of the struggles fought by the plebs and the patres in Rome; such is the history of the victory which the bourgeoisie won over the nobility of feudal origin, a victory well noted by modern socialists. [p. 36].

[Source: Vilfredo Pareto, "Un applicazione di teorie sociologiche," Revista Italiana di sociologia, 1901, p. 402-456; translated as The Rise and Fall of the Elites: An Application of Theoretical Sociology, Introduction by Hans L. Zetterberg (Totowa, N. J: Bedminster Press, 1968.)]

10. Franz Oppenheimer (1864-1943): the political means vs. the economic means of acquiring wealth (1922)

There are two fundamentally opposed means whereby man, requiring sustenance, is impelled to obtain the necessary means for satisfying his desires. These are work and robbery, one's own labor and the forcible appropriation of the labor of others. Robbery! Forcible appropriation! These words convey to us ideas of crime and the penitentiary, since we are the contemporaries of a developed civilization, specifically based on the inviolability of property. And this tang is not lost when we are convinced that land and sea robbery is the primitive relation of life, just as the warriors' trade—which also for a long time is only organized mass robbery—constitutes the most respected of occupations. Both because of this, and also on account of the need of having, in the further development of this study, terse, clear, sharply opposing terms for these very important contrasts, I propose in the following discussion to call one's own labor and the equivalent exchange of one's own labor for the labor of others, the "economic means" for the satisfaction of needs, while the unrequited appropriation of the labor of others will be called the "political means."

[Source: Franz Oppenheimer, The State: Its History and Development viewed Sociologically, authorized translation by John M. Gitterman (New York: B.W. Huebsch, 1922) <<http://oll.libertyfund.org/title/1662/3696>>]

Home

Quick Search

People

Periods

Schools of Thought

Titles

Subject Areas

Topics

Liberty Fund Books

Quotations

Audio

About the PLL

[Copyright and Fair
Use Statement](#)

Thomas Clarkson

1760 – 1846

Titles on this disk:

author: An Essay on the Slavery and Commerce of the Human Species

author: The History of the Abolition of the African Slave-Trade, vol. 1

author: The History of the Abolition of the African Slave-Trade, vol. 2

Quotation:

(12 March, 2007) Thomas Clarkson on the "glorious" victory of the abolition of the slave trade in England \(1808\)

About this person:

Clarkson was the leading opponent of the slave trade and slavery in England in the late 18th and early 19th centuries. His opposition was based on religious (he was an evangelical Anglican), moral, political, and economic grounds and he had an enormous impact in Europe and the United States.

Dimensions du Navire Négrier
I. BRÜCKES.

sur la préparation des canonniers p. 6.

Longueur de l'axe M. A. A. 220.1 et 271	220	271
Largeur de l'axe N. B. 200.1 et 171	200	171
Profondeur de la table D. O. 9	9	9
Épaisseur des BRÜCKES	1.75	1.75
Longueur de la chambre des canonniers L. C.	14.70	43
Profondeur intérieure de la chambre des canonniers (L. D. B. 220.1 et 171) longueur	14.70	43
Chambre des canonniers N. F. 220.1 et 171 longueur	14.70	43
Profondeur ou largeur de la chambre des canonniers (L. D. B. 220.1 et 171)	14.70	43
Chambre des canonniers (L. D. B. 220.1 et 171) largeur	14.70	43
Plateforme de la chambre des canonniers	2	2
M. B. 220.1 et 171	2	2
Largeur	2	2
Hauteur de la table L. F. 220.1 et 171	2	2
Largeur	2	2
Hauteur d'arrière M. N. 220.1 et 171	2	2
Largeur	2	2
Chambre de l'artillerie L. F. 220.1 et 171 longueur	2	2
Largeur	2	2
Le demi pont M. et N. M. 220.1 et 171 longueur	2	2
Largeur	2	2
Plateforme du demi pont	2	2
Largeur	2	2
Le demi pont V. T. 220.1 et 171	2	2
Largeur	2	2
1) Dans la plupart des Navires Négriers on dispose une galerie entre le pont et plateforme. (M. B. 220.1 et 171)

Intérieur du Navire Négrier. Coupe verticale sur la longueur du Bâtiment.

Coupes verticales en travers du premier pont et des deux ponts.

Coupes horizontales suivant la longueur du Bâtiment du demi pont et de ses plateformes.

Recommended Films & TV Shows

I recommend the following films and TV shows (they are in chronological order of date made):

- Lewis Milestone, All Quiet on the Western Front (1930). 133 mins.
- Michael Curtiz, The Adventures of Robin Hood (1938). 102 mins.
- Akira Kurosawa, The Seven Samurai (1954). 207 mins.
- Stanley Kubrick, Spartacus (1960). 198 mins (restored version).
- Yes, Minister (BBC TV, 1980-84) and Yes, Prime Minister (BBC TV, 1986-1988)

Lewis Milestone, All Quiet on the Western Front (1930). 133 mins. Based on the best-selling novel by the German author Erich Maria Remarque, this is an American made movie with American actors playing the enemy. The novel and film have a strong anti-war message which explains why the Nazis hated them passionately. When the film was released in Germany the Hitler Youth would go to cinemas in order to disrupt the showing. The novel was one of many that the Nazis burned in their ritualistic “cleansing” of German culture in May 1933. The film is remarkable for many reasons: it is hard to imagine American actors today playing sympathetically their erstwhile enemies as young, frightened, indoctrinated, and brutalised cannon fodder serving the interests of the ruling government which sent them into battle (even to ask why haven’t American directors and actors played Vietcong or Iraqis in a war film is to answer it); the role that nationalistic public schools play in indoctrinating youth to hate the traditional enemy is well shown (“How sweet and fitting it is to die for the Fatherland”); as is the mindless brutality inflicted upon the soldiers by the NCOs; and the utter waste of life caused by mechanized, industrialized killing in the trenches of WWI.

Michael Curtiz, The Adventures of Robin Hood (1938). 102 mins. Robin Hood helps the peasants defend themselves from the rapacious Prince John who takes advantage of the absence of the legitimate king of England to raise taxes. Good on class theory (the Saxon peasants vs. the Norman lords), the right to resist unjust taxes, the iniquity of the king reserving the best land for himself, and the explicit depiction of the crude exploitation of ordinary people by the state. Key line: Maid Marion accuses Robin of speaking treason; his answer? “Yes, fluently”.

Akira Kurosawa, The Seven Samurai (1954). 207 mins. Kurosawa admired American westerns and borrowed from them in this movie. The Americans repaid the favour by remaking this film as The Magnificent Seven (1960) but this time set in Mexico. The central state has broken down and is no longer able to defend its citizens from rapacious bands of thieves and bandits. A small village pools its resources to employ seven unemployed samurai to defend them from the next bandit attack. Good on the right and the ability of voluntary groups to organize their own defence.

Stanley Kubrick, Spartacus (1960). 198 mins (restored version). The novel upon which this film was based was written by a communist (Howard Fast) and adapted for the screen by another who was blacklisted during the McCarthy period (Dalton Trumbo). However, without the courage of Kirk Douglas (a non-communist) who starred as Spartacus and produced the film, this story would never have reached the screen as he had to break the Hollywood ban on employing Trumbo. In spite of its left-wing origins the story is a powerful one about the struggle by a slave for personal freedom against the militaristic slave society which was ancient Rome. We have little information about the actual man Spartacus (the history we have was written by the victorious slave owners and their intellectual friends who defeated him) or what political philosophy (if any) motivated him and his followers. We should watch the film as myth and as an anachronistic tale of the fight for individual liberty.

Yes, Minister (BBC TV, 1980-84) and Yes, Prime Minister (BBC TV, 1986-1988) were made for television by the British Broadcasting Commission. They were written by Anthony Jay and Jonathan Lynn and show the life of the Minister of Administrative Affairs (he was in charge of the civil service) who eventually becomes the Prime Minister of Britain. Every episode is a veritable lesson in public choice theory of economics. It shows the self-interested behaviour of the elected politicians (to be seen favourably in the opinion polls, to get re-elected, to become a minister, or eventually prime minister) and the permanent members of the civil service (to get better pay, promotions, and eventually honours such as a knighthood). This is a cynical, witty, clever, and more politically accurate version of how politics works than that which was shown in the American TV series The West Wing (Warner Bros. TV, 1999-2006).

Recommended Reading

Pre-conference Reading

Murray Rothbard, "The Anatomy of the State" in Egalitarianism as a Revolt against Nature (2nd ed. Ludwig von Mises Institute, 2000).

- Online edition of essay alone
<http://mises.org/books/anatomy_of_the_state.pdf>
- Online edition of entire book <<http://mises.org/books/egalitarianism.pdf>>

Additional Recommended Reading: Theory

Frédéric Bastiat, "The State", in Selected Essays on Political Economy, trans. Seymour Cain, ed. George B. de Huszar, introduction by F.A. Hayek (Irvington-on-Hudson: Foundation for Economic Education, 1995).

- Online edition < <http://oll.libertyfund.org/title/956/35453> >

Frédéric Bastiat, "The Physiology of Plunder" in Economic Sophisms, trans. Arthur Goddard, introduction by Henry Hazlitt (Irvington-on-Hudson: Foundation for Economic Education, 1996).

- Online edition < <http://oll.libertyfund.org/title/276/23376> >

Randolph Bourne, The State (Tucson, Arizona: See Sharp Press, 1998).

- Online edition <http://mises.org/books/State_Bourne.pdf>

Edmund Burke, *A Vindication of Natural Society: or, a View of the Miseries and Evils arising to Mankind from every Species of Artificial Society. In a Letter to Lord  by a Late Noble Writer, ed. Frank N. Pagano (Indianapolis: Liberty Fund, Inc., 1982).

- Online edition < <http://oll.libertyfund.org/title/850>>

Margaret Levi, Of Rule and Revenue (Berkeley: University of California Press, 1988).

Margaret Levi, "The Predatory Theory of Rule," Politics and Society, 1981, vol. 10, no. 4, pp. 431-65.

Ludwig von Mises, "The Clash of Group Interests" in The Clash of Group Interests and Other Essays (The Center for Libertarian Studies, New York, 1978).

- Online edition <<http://mises.org/books/clash.pdf>>

Ludwig von Mises, Chapter 9 "The Role of Ideas" Section 3 "Might" in, Human Action: A Treatise on Economics, in 4 vols., ed. Bettina Bien Greaves (Indianapolis: Liberty Fund, 2007). Vol. 1. Chapter: 3: Might.

- Online edition < <http://oll.libertyfund.org/title/1893/110315> >

Gaetano Mosca, The Ruling Class. Elementi di scienza politica, ed. and revised by Arthur Livingston, trans. Hannah D. Kahn (New York: McGraw-Hill, 1939).

Robert Nisbet, Twilight of Authority (New York: Oxford University Press, 1975).

Albert Jay Nock, Our Enemy the State. Including "On Doing the Right Thing", introduction by Walter E. Grinder (New York: Free Life Editions, 1973).

Franz Oppenheimer, The State: Its History and Development viewed Sociologically, authorized translation by John M. Gitterman (New York: B.W. Huebsch, 1922).

- Online edition <<http://oll.libertyfund.org/title/1662/3696>>

Vilfredo Pareto, The Rise and Fall of the Elites: An Application of Theoretical Sociology, Introduction by Hans L. Zetterberg (Totowa, N. J: Bedminster Press, 1968).

Vilfredo Pareto, The Other Pareto, ed. Placido Bucolo, trans. Placido and Gillian Bucolo, with a Preface by Ronald Fletcher (London: Scolar Press, 1980).

Gianfranco Poggi, The Development of the Modern State: A Sociological Introduction (Stanford University press, 1978).

Ralph Raico, "Classical Liberal Exploitation Theory: A Comment on Professor Liggio's Paper" in the Journal of Libertarian Studies, 1977 vol. 4, no. 1.

- Online edition <http://mises.org/journals/jls/I_3/I_3_2.pdf>

Murray N. Rothbard, Power and Market: Government and the Economy (Menlo Park, CA: Institute for Humane Studies, 1970).

- Online edition <<https://mises.org/books/powermarket.pdf>>

Herbert Spencer, "The Right to Ignore the State" in Social Statics: or, The Conditions essential to Happiness specified, and the First of them Developed, (London: John Chapman, 1851).

- Online edition <<http://oll.libertyfund.org/title/273/6325>>

Additional Recommended Reading: History of Ideas

John Emerich Edward Dalberg, Lord Acton, Acton-Creighton Correspondence (1887)

- Online edition < <http://oll.libertyfund.org/title/2254> >

Jeremy Bentham, "Principles of Judicial Procedure", The Works of Jeremy Bentham, published under the Superintendence of his Executor, John Bowring (Edinburgh: William Tait, 1843). 11 vols.

- Online edition <<http://oll.libertyfund.org/title/1921/113753/2341232>>

Étienne de la Boétie, The Discourse of Voluntary Servitude, trans. Harry Kurz (1942).

- Online edition < <http://oll.libertyfund.org/title/2250> >

John C. Calhoun, A Disquisition of Government (1849) in Union and Liberty: The Political Philosophy of John C. Calhoun, ed. Ross M. Lence (Indianapolis: Liberty Fund, 1992).

- Online edition <<http://oll.libertyfund.org/title/683/107113/1934493>>

Joseph Hamburger, Intellectuals in Politics: John Stuart Mill and the Philosophic Radicals (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1965).

David Hume, “Of the First Principles of Government” in Essays Moral, Political, Literary, edited and with a Foreword, Notes, and Glossary by Eugene F. Miller, with an appendix of variant readings from the 1889 edition by T.H. Green and T.H. Grose, revised edition (Indianapolis: Liberty Fund 1987).

- Online edition <<http://oll.libertyfund.org/title/704/137484>>

David Hume, “Of the Origin of Government” in Essays Moral, Political, Literary, edited and with a Foreword, Notes, and Glossary by Eugene F. Miller, with an appendix of variant readings from the 1889 edition by T.H. Green and T.H. Grose, revised edition (Indianapolis: Liberty Fund 1987).

- Online edition <<http://oll.libertyfund.org/title/704/137486>>

James Mill, Essays on Government, Jurisprudence, Liberty of the Press, Prison and Prison Discipline, Colonies, Laws of Nations, Education from the Supplement to the Encyclopedia Britannica (London: Routledge, 1992, reprint of 1828 ed.).

- Online edition <<http://oll.libertyfund.org/title/1759>>

Herbert Spencer, “The Militant Type of Society” in Political Institutions, being Part V of the Principles of Sociology (The Concluding Portion of Vol. II) (London: Williams and Norgate, 1882).

- Online edition <<http://oll.libertyfund.org/title/1336/54831>>

Herbert Spencer, “The Industrial Type of Society” in Political Institutions, being Part V of the Principles of Sociology (The Concluding Portion of Vol. II) (London: Williams and Norgate, 1882).

- Online edition <<http://oll.libertyfund.org/title/1336/54833>>

John Wade, The Extraordinary Black Book: an exposition of abuses in church and state, courts of law, representation, municipal and corporate bodies, with a précis of the House of Commons, past, present, and to come (London: Effingham Wilson, 1832).

- Online edition <Google Books>

Additional Recommended Reading: History

Perry Anderson, Lineages of the Absolutist State (London: Verso, 1979).

Perry Anderson, Passages from Antiquity to Feudalism (London: Verso, 1979).

Arms, Politics, and the Economy: Historical and Contemporary Perspectives, ed. Robert Higgs, foreword by William A. Niskanen (New York: Holmes & Meier, 1990).

Reinhard Bendix, Kings or People: Power and the Mandate to Rule (Berkeley: University of California Press, 1980).

Robert B. Ekelund, Jr. and Robert D. Tollison, Mercantilism as a Rent-Seeking Society: Economic Regulation in Historical Perspective (Texas A&M University Press).

Richard Franklin Bensel, Yankee Leviathan: The Origins of Central State Authority in America, 1859-1877 (Cambridge University Press, 1990).

Bringing the State Back In, ed. Peter B. Evans, Dietrich Rueschemeyer, Theda Skocpol (Cambridge University Press, 1985).

Cities and the Rise of States in Europe, A. D. 1000 to 1800, ed. Charles Tilly and Wm. P. Blockmans (Boulder: Westview Press, 1994).

The Early State, ed. Henri J.M. Claessen and Peter Skalnik (The Hague: Mouton, 1978).

Martin van Crefeld, The Rise and Decline of the State (Cambridge University Press, 1999).

The Formation of National States in Western Europe, ed. Charles Tilly (Princeton University Press, 1975).

Bernard Guenée, States and Rulers in Later Medieval Europe (Oxford: Basil Blackwell, 1985).

Robert Higgs, Crisis and Leviathan: Critical Episodes in the Growth of American Government (New York: Oxford University Press, 1987).

Otto Hintze, The Historical Essays of Otto Hintze, edited with an Introduction by Felix Gilbert (New York: Oxford University Press, 1975).

Ruling America: A History of Wealth and Power in a Democracy, ed. Steve Fraser and Gary Gerstle (Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 2005).

Alexander Rüstow, Freedom and Domination: A Historical Critique of Civilization, abbreviated translation from the German by Salvator Attanasio, edited and with an Introduction by Dankwart A. Rustow (Princeton University Press, 1980).

Stephen Skowronek, Building a New American State: The Expansion of National Administrative Capacities 1877-1920 (Cambridge University Press, 1982).

Charles Tilly, Coercion, Capital, and European States, AD 990-1990 (Oxford: Basil Blackwell, 1990).